

Comparative Economics International Workshop: “Emerging markets, Market Quality and Corporate Society”

Organized by Institute of Economic Research (KIER), Kyoto University and the Japanese Society for Comparative Economic Studies Co-organized by The National Economics University, Vietnam and The University of Shimane

1. 【Objective of Workshop】

This International workshop is organized by KIER and the Japanese Society for Comparative Economic Studies for the young scholars, and is supported by The National Economics University (NEU), The University of Shimane and other Vietnamese academic organizations. It has following targets: training the next generation for comparative economics; promoting exchange of young scholars in Japan and Vietnam; enhancing the global network for scholars. In addition, Vietnam has become a research target for comparative economics. This workshop may be regarded as the first attempt within the Asian academic organizations. Even though so many Asian academic associations on comparative economics have enhanced their linkage mutually year by year, we have no experiences of organizing the young scholars training conference in Asia.

The workshop has the following topic “Emerging markets, Market Quality and Corporate Society”. This topic means that under the globalization the contemporary market system has faced the unprecedented challenge and the theoretical base for comparative economics must be re-examined. Through the workshop, we have the advanced topic on this topic, and exchange our research results among young scholars. English is used in the workshop fundamentally.
